

This is an unofficial summary of the points that are listed in the Administration and Attendance Policy. This document should be used for educational purposes only. References to policy should be done in the official version found on the CUS website.

1. A service of the CUS is any event or service the CUS is responsible for. A delegate is someone who attends or uses a service.
2. All services under the CUS shall abide by the CUS Administration and Attendance Policy. All delegates must be made aware of the policy. (The policy is in the terms and conditions of attendance on Rezgo, the event registration system for the CUS).
3. If a student attends or organizes a service of the CUS, they are a representative of the Sauder School of Business and UBC. Any relations with anyone outside of the CUS must be professional, respectful, and ethical.
4. Any information received from a delegate is to be used for its intended purpose only and is confidential. All services of the CUS are on an “as is” basis, are not guaranteed, and are attended at the delegate’s risk. The CUS is not responsible for a delegate missing a portion or all of the conference for substantial reasons. (See official policy for a full list of reasons).
5. Inappropriate behaviour by a delegate shall not be tolerated. The CUS shall not be responsible for any expenses as a result of a delegate’s poor behaviour. The organizers reserve the right to remove anyone from an event if it is found that their behaviour is inappropriate. (See official policy for definitions and examples).
6. By attending or using a service of the CUS, all delegates wave their photographic rights in general. All media is the property of the CUS.
7. Refunds are granted with certain time restrictions. If the CUS cancels an event, the delegates will receive a full refund. All refunds are processed no earlier than 7 day prior to the occurrence of a service. (See official policy for restrictions)
